DIGITAL FUTURES ACADEMY

The Digital Futures Academy originates from a partnership between SDA Bocconi School of Management and Capgemini and was set up to offer a set of managerial and technological training opportunities for talents, professionals and executives in the field of ICT consulting and digital transformation.

The context in which SDA Bocconi School of Management and Capgemini in Italy have decided to design the Digital Futures Academy features:

- Large gap between available resources and demand for ICT professional profiles
- Lack of training and job placement paths with the right balance between learning and on the job training
- Perceived lack of differentiation among the opportunities offered to young talents by the various System Integrators and ICT consultants
- Call for a better understanding for managers and consultants of the overall impact of digital innovation on businesses.

The Digital Futures Academy aims to meet industry needs by designing high-profile initiatives that combine typical management training themes with the tech topics needed to navigate the world of ICT consulting.

THE FUTURE OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS MANAGEMENT

The Digital Futures Academy launches an initiative dedicated to young recent graduates in programs of: Fintech, Economics and STEM who would like to become junior professionals working as consultants on Capgemini consulting projects. The target profile of the candidates:

- Have graduated/will graduate shortly from Fintech, Economics or STEM programs
- Fluent in English (the course is fully taught in English)
- Average age is 26
- Deeply interested in the world of consulting.
